COMMUNITY SAFETY

The best way to deal with crime and victimization is to stop crime before it occurs. All communities are safer when citizens work together to build safe and healthy neighborhoods and workplaces. Public safety is a shared responsibility, in which both citizens and police have important roles. Small steps are often the best way to start building safe and healthy communities, which could involve such simple things as alerting your neighbors or the police when suspicious activity seems to be happening.

Here are some suggestions for building your local community to enhance security and quality-of-life:

SUSPICIOUS ACTIVITY

Call the police, or in an emergency call 911. One of the most useful tools for crime prevention is to call your local police, or in an emergency call 911.

You may think that the police do not want to be called if something suspicious is happening, but that is not the case.

When in doubt, call the police. Here are some situations in which you should call your local police or use 911:

- Unusual noises, such as someone screaming for help
- A vehicle that seems to be "casing" the neighborhood
- Furniture being removed from homes when the owners are on vacation or at work
- An abandoned car that is unknown to you or your neighbors
- A stranger looking into homes or parked cars
- Unusual activities of pets, such as a dog barking that is normally quiet
- A salesperson going door to door who doesn't have the proper credentials

MYTHS AND FACTS

Almost everyone has an opinion on trends in break-and-enters – why they occur or how to prevent them. Here are some facts regarding a few myths about break-ins. Most residential break-ins happen at night. Most residential break-ins actually happen during the day, when the majority of people are not at home.

A chain lock offers good security. People buy chain locks in the belief that they provide adequate protection when answering the door. But the fact is that chain locks actually offer very little protection against the threat of a forced entry, and can result in a false sense of security when a superior lock is disengaged.

A wide-angle peephole on your door is far superior because it will allow you to see who is outside your door while preventing the person from seeing inside your home and possibly breaking the chain lock.

An alarm system is all that I need to protect my home and family. Unfortunately, this view is NOT shared by the average thief, and you may still be at risk.

Residential alarm systems do indeed offer an increased level of security and some deterrence to criminals. However, they should not be considered as exclusive replacements for other home security measures, but should be used in conjunction with them.

LIGHTING

Lighting is one of the most cost-effective deterrents to burglary. Indoor lighting gives the impression that a home is occupied. If you are going to be away from your home, consider using automatic timers to switch interior lights on and off at preset times. Outdoor lighting can eliminate hiding places. Install exterior lighting near porches, rear and side doorways, garage doors, and all other points of entry. Entryways to your home always should be well lighted. Place lights out of reach from the ground so the bulbs cannot be removed or broken. Aim some lights away from the house so you can see if anyone is approaching, or install motion-sensing lights, which turn on automatically as someone approaches.

SHRUBS AND LANDSCAPING

Your home's walkways and landscaping should direct visitors to the main entrance and away from private areas. The landscaping should provide maximum visibility to and from your house. Trim shrubbery that could conceal criminal activity near doors and windows. Provide light on areas of dense shrubs and trees that could serve as hiding places. Cut back tree limbs that could help thieves climb into windows, and keep yard fencing low enough to avoid giving criminals places to hide.

Making your home safer from crime doesn't always mean having to install expensive alarms—effective home security starts with properly locked doors and windows and visible, well-lighted entryways.

EXTERIOR DOORS

All exterior doors should be either metal or solid wood. For added security, use strong door hinges on the inside of the door, with non-removable or hidden pins. Every entry door should be well lighted and have a wide-angle door viewer so you can see who is outside without opening the door.

LOCKS

Strong, reliable locks are essential to effective home security. Always keep doors and windows locked—even a five-minute trip to the store is long enough for a burglar to enter your home. Use quality keyed knobs as well as deadbolts—deadbolts can withstand the twisting, turning, prying, and pounding that a regular keyed knob can't. When choosing a deadbolt, look for such features as a bolt that extends at least one inch when in the locked position, to resist ramming and kicking; hardened steel inserts to prevent the bolt from being sawed off, and a reinforced strike plate with extra long mounting screws to anchor the lock effectively.

Most deadbolts are single-cylinder; they operate from the outside with a key and from the inside with a thumb latch. Double-cylinder deadbolts require a key to open the lock from both outside and inside your home. These locks are especially effective for doors with glass within 40 inches of the lock—an intruder cannot break the glass and unlock the door by reaching through. Some jurisdictions do not allow these locks—check with your local law enforcement or building code authorities before installing a double cylinder deadbolt. As one alternative, security glazing can be applied to glass panels in or near the door, or shatterproof glass can be installed, though these options can be expensive.

SLIDING GLASS DOORS

Sliding glass doors can offer easy entry into your home. To improve security on existing sliding glass doors, you can install keyed locking devices that secure the door to the frame; adjust the track clearances on the doors so they can't be pushed out of their tracks; or put a piece of wood or a metal bar in the track of the closed door to prevent the door from opening even if the lock is jimmied or removed.

WINDOWS

Most standard double-hung windows have thumbturn locks between the two window panels. Don't rely on these—they can be pried open or easily reached through a broken pane. Instead, install keyed locking devices to prevent the window from being raised from the outside, but make sure everyone in the house knows where to find the keys in case of an emergency. Some jurisdictions have restrictions on this type of lock—check with your local law enforcement before you install them. An easy, inexpensive way to secure your windows is to use the "pin" trick. Drill an angled hole through the top frame of the lower window partially into the frame of the upper window. Then insert a nail or eyebolt. The window can't be opened until you remove the nail. Make a second set of holes with the windows partly opened so you can have ventilation without intruders.
